Senator Eckhardt submitted the following statement regarding HB 1057:

Millions of people have endured torture, abuse, and death at the hands of totalitarian regimes, including communism. Those people and the suffering they endured are surely worthy of our thought and remembrance. Yet communism is just one label of the many totalitarian regimes which hoard power to the few, resist democratic ideals, and strip people of their inalienable rights. If this bill had sought to commemorate the victims of all totalitarian regimes – no matter the political philosophy – I would have enthusiastically supported it. But this bill fails that test, and instead is designed to be a symbolic vote to force adherence to a particular political ideology. I can therefore neither support nor oppose the bill.

REMARKS ORDERED PRINTED

On motion of Senator Buckingham and by unanimous consent, the remarks by Senators Buckingham and Hancock regarding CSSB 993 were ordered reduced to writing and printed in the Senate Journal as follows:

Senator Buckingham: Thank you, Mr. President. Alright, so, Senator Hancock, these scope bills are a big deal, and I think we all want patients to be treated at the highest standard of care, and the standard in this case for ophthalmologists, regardless of whether or not the ophthalmologist or optometrist is providing their care, is the American Academy of Ophthalmology Preferred Practice Patterns on glaucoma. Correct?

Senator Hancock: Correct. As you know, you know, assisting in this bill, they have been held to the same standards since 1999, and this does not change that.

Senator Buckingham: And the bill also has a new provision which protects patients by instituting a peer review by ophthalmologists and optometrists. It requires optometrists to be held at the same standard of care we just discussed. So, tell me a little bit about that peer review process.

Senator Hancock: Alright, so, the process is actually regarding to the glaucoma-related complaints, and that process will be optometrists and ophthalmologists will appoint, and the respect, from their respective boards, collaborative review board that will deal with the complaints and make recommendations for disciplinary action if necessary. The peer review process between the two boards will be in existence for six years.

Senator Buckingham: Okay, let’s just talk a little bit about another protection in the bill. In accordance with the bill, if a patient’s condition is worsening on medical management at all, even the slightest bit of progression, the patient must immediately be referred to an ophthalmologist. Is that true?

Senator Hancock: Correct. If a, initial treatment in minor cases would be handled there. If there was any additional treatment or any extension of the glaucoma, it would be referred to an ophthalmologist.

Senator Buckingham: Thank you, Senator Hancock, for that. The goals of managing patients with primary open-angle glaucoma are to control intraocular pressure in a target range and to prevent progressive visual field and optic nerve or retinal nerve fiber layer damage in order to preserve visual function and quality of life.
This is why the referral for progression component in Section 351.3581(d)(5) is so important, especially when there is a failure of medical management defined as an inability to reduce a patient's intraocular pressure to target range on topical anti-glaucoma medications. In medical terms, progression is defined as any change to the optic nerve or visual field which includes and is not limited to, one, progressive changes to the optic nerve neural, retinal rim, and/or retinal nerve fiber layer on ophthalmoscopy, stereoscopic fundus photographs, ocular coherence tomography, or any new advanced diagnostic modality assessing the optic nerve and nerve fiber layer structure. Any visual field change from baseline in three different points on consecutive visual field tests and/or a worsening in the mean deviation and/or pattern standard deviation. Once progression is detected, it's important to refer the patient for a higher level of care to prevent further progressive and permanent nerve or vision loss. Isn't that correct?

Senator Hancock: Or in Senator Hancock’s terms, any progress in the glaucoma, an ophthalmologist must receive a referral.

Senator Buckingham: That's good.

Senator Hancock: Your words.

Senator Buckingham: Yes, Sir. And you also put some additional patient protections in this bill requiring a referral of a patient who is not responding to treatment. A patient who arrives at the optometrist's door with any of the following must also immediately be referred to an ophthalmologist: the patient has uncontrolled intraocular pressure in one or both eyes and is 16 years of age or less; a patient has an acute episode of uncontrolled intraocular pressure that is immediately sight threatening such as neovascular glaucoma, acute angle closure glaucoma, or a traumatic hyphema; a patient with the diagnosis of advanced glaucoma in one or both eyes, regardless of age, as defined by CMS, glaucomatous visual field loss in both hemifields or visual field loss in only one hemifield but defect encroaches within five degrees of fixation; a patient with chronic glaucoma that is progressing as defined by a worsening of their optic nerve and/or visual field while under treatment by a therapeutic optometrist requires timely consultation with an ophthalmologist; if the treating therapeutic optometrist is unable to lower the intraocular pressure to the desired target pressure range for their patient, which is based on their stage of disease and other factors, the patient has a refractory glaucoma and a consultation with an ophthalmologist is required. The timing of the referral consult should depend on the risk factors associated with the likelihood of glaucomatous disease progression. Isn't that correct?

Senator Hancock: Correct.

Senator Buckingham: In addition, there are other situations when referral is indicated. Correct? For example, if a patient fails to reach target pressures, typically defined as a minimum of 20 to 30 percent reduction in intraocular pressure from baseline and/or failure to reduce an intraocular pressure below 18 mmHg, the patient will be at risk for continued nerve damage and vision loss. This has been proven in many large-scale epidemiologic studies. Isn't that correct, Senator?

Senator Hancock: Correct.
Senator Buckingham: And so, thank you, Senator Hancock. I appreciate being able to work with you on this bill. And when the time is right, Mr. President, I'd like to move that the discussion between Senator Hancock and myself be reduced to writing and placed in the Journal.
